Leicestershire Faces Persistent Risks from Trespassing and Asset Crime Amid Stable Public Order Concerns

Observations

The risk landscape in Leicestershire is characterised by consistently high likelihoods across a range of threats, with risk scores predominantly at 7 out of 10, indicating a significant potential for these incidents to occur. These scores are derived from a combination of demographic, environmental, and historical data inputs, providing an objective assessment of the risks police may face. The top-ranked risks include 'Trespassing - Encampment', 'Asset Crime - Arson', and 'Burglary & Robbery - Walk in Burglary', all rated at 7.0, reflecting a stable but persistent threat environment. Notably, the risk of 'Ram Raid' has shown an upward trend, increasing from a score of 6.0 last month to 7.0, suggesting a growing vulnerability in this area.~~Within the top ten risks, there is a clear emphasis on property-related offences and public order challenges. 'Burglary & Robbery' risks dominate the list with multiple entries, including 'Walk in Burglary', 'Burglary', and 'Ram Raid', underscoring ongoing concerns around unlawful entry and theft. 'Asset Crime' risks such as 'Vehicle Damage' and 'Criminal Damage' also feature prominently, highlighting threats to both private and commercial property. Public order risks, including 'Protest' and 'Rough Sleepers', maintain moderate risk scores of 7.0 and 6.0 respectively, indicating stable but noteworthy concerns that may impact community safety and require monitoring.~~The overall trend since last month shows relative stability across most risk categories, with the exception of 'Ram Raid', which has increased in likelihood. This may reflect evolving criminal tactics or changes in local conditions such as economic pressures or security measures. The persistent high risk of trespassing, particularly encampments, suggests ongoing challenges related to land use and social issues within Leicestershire. While no immediate escalation in life-threatening risks is evident, the sustained high risk scores across property and public order offences highlight areas where vigilance remains essential to maintain community safety.
